ORDER

Currently pending before the court in this action, in which plaintiff seeks judicial review of an adverse administrative determination by the Acting Commissioner, pursuant to 42 U.S.C. §§ 405(g) and 1383(c)(3), are cross-motions for judgment on the pleadings.<sup>1</sup> Oral argument was conducted in connection with those motions on May 9, 2017, during a telephone conference held on the record. At the close of argument, I issued a bench decision in which, after applying the requisite deferential review standard, I found that the Acting Commissioner's determination did not result from the application of proper legal principles and is not supported by substantial evidence, providing further detail regarding my reasoning and addressing the specific issues raised by the plaintiff in this appeal.

After due deliberation, and based upon the court's oral bench decision, a transcript of which is attached and incorporated herein by reference, it is hereby

ORDERED, as follows:

- 1) Plaintiff's motion for judgment on the pleadings is GRANTED.
- 2) The Acting Commissioner's determination that plaintiff was not

2 THE COURT: All right. I'll have to let that be 3 the last word. So I have before me a request for judicial 4 review of an adverse determination of the Acting Commissioner 5 pursuant to 42 United States Code Section 405(g) and 6 1383(c)(3).

7 The background is as follows: The plaintiff was 8 born in February of 1975, is currently 42 years old, was 37 9 years old at the time of the alleged onset of her disability, 10 and 39 at the time of the hearing in this matter. She is 11 5-foot-8 in height and weighs 219 pounds. She's right-hand 12 dominant. She has a high school diploma and two years of 13 college education. She has a CNA certificate as well. She 14 has also had customer service training.

15 She lives with her 17-year-old daughter in a 16 two-family house on the first floor of that house. She does 17 not drive and hasn't since 2012. She has not worked since 18 October 24, 2012, except for an attempt at training at an 19 Express Mart. In her past, she was a hair stylist. She 20 stopped in that position in December of 2013. She has also 21 worked as a fast food worker, a certified nursing assistant, 22 a customer service representative, she's worked in sales, as 23 a factory worker, and a warehouse packer. That's at 320 and 24 324 of the administrative transcript.

25 Physically, the plaintiff has been diagnosed with

1 multiple sclerosis with parathesis, that was in July of 2012.
2 She suffers from numbness and pain from the waist down. She 3 also experiences migraine headaches approximately four times 4 per week and fatigue. She uses a cane to ambulate. She has 5 undergone infusions including in 2012 and twice in 2013. Her
6 primary physician is Dr. Jianxin Ma. She was referred to a 7 specialist, Dr. Megan Hyland. She has had MRIs in 8 October 2012, July 2013, December 2013, and June 2014. Those 9 are all contained in the record.

10 She also suffers from mental impairments. One of 11 the sources or triggers was that her son was killed in 12 February 2013. That's at 291 and 321. She's been diagnosed 13 as suffering from depressive disorder at 323 and 292 and 14 major depressive disorder at 534. She's undergone treatment
15 for the mental conditions at the Syracuse Community Health 16 Center where she sees Emily Stowell and Dr. Bill Hines. She 17 suffers, among other things, from crying spells.

18 Medically she's been treated with Wellbutrin,
19 gabapentin, Gilenya, Topamax, tramadol, trazodone, hydroxy --
20 hydroxyzine, Copaxone, and Amantadine.

21 Procedurally, the plaintiff applied for Title II
22 and Title XVI benefits on June 20, 2013 alleging an onset 23 date of October 24, 2012. A hearing was conducted by 24 Administrative Law Judge Gregory Hamel on December 3, 2014.
25 The administrative law judge issued a decision on January 30,

1 2015, and that became a final determination of the agency on 2 September 20, 2016, when the appeals council rejected the 3 request for review of that determination.

4 In his decision, ALJ Hamel applied the familiar
5 five-step sequential test for determining disability.

6 At step one he concluded that the plaintiff had not 7 engaged in substantial gainful activity since the alleged 8 onset date.

9 At step two he found that she suffers from severe
10 impairments including MS, headaches, obesity, and depressive 11 disorder.

12 At step three, he concluded that she did not meet
13 or medically equal any of the listed presumptively disabling 14 impairments.

15 After surveying the medical records, the ALJ
16 concluded that plaintiff retains the residual functional
17 capacity or RFC to perform sedentary work with exceptions
18 including, she can only occasionally climb stairs, balance,
19 stoop, kneel, crouch and crawl, cannot climb ladders, ropes
20 or scaffolds, cannot work in hazardous work environments, can 21 use the hands for frequent but not constant handling,
22 fingering and reaching, can do routine and repetitive tasks
23 only and cannot do tasks requiring more than occasional 24 public contact.

25 Applying that RFC, the administrative law judge

1 concluded that plaintiff cannot meet the requirements of any 2 of her past relevant work. He then indicated that if the 3 medical vocational guidelines were to control, a finding of 4 no disability would be required by Grid Rule 201.28. He 5 elicited the testimony of a vocational expert and concluded
6 that plaintiff can perform as an addresser, a document
7 preparer, and a cuff folder, and therefore is not disabled.

8 As you know, my task is limited to determining 9 whether correct legal principles were applied and substantial 10 evidence supports the ALJ's determination. It is a highly 11 deferential standard.

12 Obviously pivotal to the ALJ's finding was his 13 rejection of the two opinions of Dr. Hyland and of Dr. Hines
14 and Emily Stowell concerning absenteeism. There isn't any 15 doubt that the vocational expert concluded that if plaintiff 16 was absent with the frequency opined by those individuals in 17 their medical source statements, she would be disabled. She 18 would not -- there would not be any work available that she 19 could perform in the national and local economy. The reason 20 for rejection of those appears at page 26, in the first 21 paragraph. The administrative law judge states, "Little 22 weight is given to Dr. Hyland's statements that the claimant 23 would be absent from work more than four days per month as 24 the ultimate question of disability is reserved to the 25 Commissioner of Social Security Administration." And the

1 second paragraph, Dr. Hines' and Ms. Stowell's opinions were 2 rejected -- they weren't rejected, they were given "little 3 weight" because, as noted, the ultimate question of 4 disability is reserved for the Commissioner of Social 5 Security Administration.

6 When you look at the two regulations that control,
7 20 C.F.R. Section 404.1527(d)(1) and (2), and also 20 C.F.R.
8 Section 416.927(d)(1) and (2), the first relates to opinions 9 that you are disabled and a statement that a claimant is 10 disabled clearly is something that's reserved to the 11 Commissioner. (d)(2) reserves -- does allow for 12 consideration of opinions of medical sources, whether they're 13 treating or not treating, on issues such as whether listings
14 are met, the residual functional capacity, or the application 15 of vocational factors, although the final responsibility for 16 deciding the issues clearly is reserved to the Commissioner.

17 This is an extremely interesting issue, and I 18 reviewed very carefully the cases both cited by plaintiff and 19 cited by the Commissioner and also that I found. So cases
20 like Barry v. Colvin are consistent in my view with (d)(2), 21 the regulation. It only says that the opinions are not 22 binding on the Commissioner regarding such things as 23 absenteeism, but it doesn't say they shouldn't be considered.
24 Saulic is the same, Saulic v. Colvin from the Northern 25 District of Ohio merely says that the opinion of a treating

1 source concerning absenteeism is not entitled to controlling
2 weight, and of course that's a good decision because it notes
3 the split of authority. Anderson v. Colvin, Western District
4 of New York 2015 at footnote 5, same. But when you look at 5 cases like Lesterhuis v. Colvin from the Second Circuit 2015, 6 Greek v. Colvin from the Second Circuit 2015, Rugless v.
7 Commissioner, Second Circuit 2013, Gavazzi v. Berryhill from 8 last month, Second Circuit, Smith v. Commissioner, the 9 District of Vermont, 2011, Coleman v. Colvin, Eastern 10 District of New York, 2017, they all show that opinions
11 concerning absenteeism at least should be considered.

12 And so in this case, the ALJ rejected them out of 13 hand. He didn't give the explanation that I heard
14 Ms. Estelle give. If he had, if he had explained why he did
15 not consider that opinion as indicating that the plaintiff 16 could not perform gainful employment, if he had related it to 17 treatment notes or related it to the type of disability or 18 disabling -- I'm sorry, medical conditions that the plaintiff
19 suffers from, then I would say that it was properly 20 considered. But to me, it's pretty clear from page 26 that 21 he considered it, the ultimate question, and therefore 22 rejected it out of hand.

23 On the other hand, I don't find necessarily that 24 there is persuasive evidence of disability. I think it's a 25 matter that should be returned to the Commissioner for

1 further consideration of those opinions, and whether or not 2 they should be rejected and if they are rejected or given 3 little weight, there should be a fuller explanation for why.

4 So I grant judgment on the pleadings to the 5 plaintiff without a directed finding of disability, vacate 6 the Commissioner's determination and remand the matter to the 7 agency for further consideration. Thank you both, this was 8 an interesting case and thank you for excellent 9 presentations.

10 MR. CADIN: Thank you, your Honor.

11 MS. ESTELLE: Thank you.

12 MR. CADIN: And thank you, Counselor.
